

Guidelines for the prevention of plagiarism

In the recent past, cases of plagiarism in course papers and theses have increased. Plagiarism is defined as the exact copy of texts - both from the Internet and in print media - without identification of the source (citation). Rules of good scientific practice generally require the thoughts of third parties to be indicated (directly or indirectly) by the use of quotes. This means that resources must be identified and passages used verbatim cited with references. The "Statute to Ensure Good Scientific Practice at the University of Konstanz" can be found here: <https://www.uni-konstanz.de/en/research/research-profile/academic-integrity-and-quality-assurance/statute-to-ensure-good-scientific-practice/>

Please note that plagiarism is always regarded as cheating and will always have consequences on the examination result. The examination will be graded in this case as "not sufficient", thus as failed. Moreover, in serious cases, further consequences, including disqualification from the repeat examination and the associated loss of the right to take examinations in the program of study may follow, resulting in withdrawal from the University. Details depend on the respective examination regulations.
